Daniel James
Cornell University, Fall 2021

"Undoubtedly, studying at UCD will be one of the most memorable experiences of my education. Too often, formal studies in your home country will make you an expert on the issues plaguing your community and nation, but often fails to encapsulate the worldview needed to promote coexistence. As an industrial and labor relations major, the modules I took in the Lochlann Quinn School of Business prepared me to understand the plight of gig, migrant, and seasonal workers in multiple international contexts, and informed the work I desired to see done in an American context."
